Is the vikings preseason game on tv tonight

(Pocket-lint) - With only a few episodes left to air, Game of Thrones season four is coming to an end and just looking at U.S. ratings alone, it's the most successful for HBO yet. It's also the most successful for the stealyweb too, with the second episode setting a new record shortly after its US debut by hitting a massive 193,418 seeds at one point for just one file. A seed is registered for each person who currently shares a file through BitTorrent, either while they download it themselves or after it is completed. That figure doesn't include people who have already downloaded the show and won't share it after that. It is estimated that about 1.5 million people downloaded that episode, in which King Joffrey and Margaery Tyrell would be lionized, in just one day. So is Game of Thrones just a freak show in Torrent terms, or are there other TV shows that are so popular among the pirate network? And how about now? Is Game of Thrones still so popular on Torrent sites, or are people looking for more legal ways to view it? To find out, we looked at files listed on The Pirate Bay, still the most popular Torrent site in the world. The day after the episode aired in the UK, Game of Thrones season four episode seven hit nearly 100,000 seeds for the standard definition copy, almost 50,000 for the 720p HD. This doesn't even include the many duplicates also listed on the site or alternative TV rips. We can safely say that, yes, the show is still hugely popular among the illegal download community, albeit slightly down to the more discussed episodes in the recent past. However, in terms of legitimate TV viewing figures, it was the most watched episode of Game of Thrones in the United States since the beginning of the show in 2011. It received 7.2 million viewers in the US alone, more than half a million more than the premiere episode of the season. It's also nearly three and a half times more viewers than the very first episode of season one. Much hype and anticipation surrounded Jack Bauer's return to screens after a four-year absence, so if anything could break Game of Thrones' dominance of the King of the Torrents it would be 24: Live Another Day. Or so you might think. Instead, the most downloaded standard definition version of episode four stood at just under 9,500 seeds. The most popular 720p HD version was seeded (when we watched) only 2,867 times. A Game of Thrones beater isn't. Not by a long chalk. Legitimate viewing figures for the episode had yet to be released at the time of writing, but the previous episode accumulated 6.48 million viewers in the U.S. As it nears its conclusion, with the seventh and final series almost halfway through, you'd think Mad Men would than it turns out to be, both via BitTorrent and in TV viewing figures. The most popular standard def version of episode six, at the time of watching, was seeded around 5,500 times and the HD a little bit 2,000. TV ratings seem to reflect the lack of interest - in the US at least - with just 1.86 million watching the previous episode. Accurate ratings for episode seven are not yet known. The second season of DC Comics' green screen performances tells a similar story. The final episode, episode 23, of the series was seeded nearly 10,000 times for the most popular standard definition version, just over 2,000 times for the HD. The ratings turned out to be 2.37 million. So, finally, none of the major event TV shows can match Game of Thrones when it comes to the pirate network, which will actually come as a consolation to their respective broadcasters. In fact, the only TV show that came close in our admittedly fast straw poll was comedy The Big Bang Theory. The most popular standard definition version of the latest episode was sown more than 21,500 times. The HD version was sown much less, at just under 3,000 times. So Game of Thrones remains an internet phenomenon, especially on the shadow side of the track. Written by Rik Henderson. Important deadline: Investors who have purchased or acquired Penumbra common stock during the class period may attempt to be appointed as lead plaintiff of the class by March 16, 2021. Until recently, one of Penumbra's flagship products was the Jet 7 Xtra Flex, an aspirational catheter designed to be inserted into an affected artery, navigated to a blood clot, and used to suck the clot out of the patient's body. The Jet 7 Xtra Flex was launched into the U.S. market in July 2019 and quickly became a growth engine for Penumbra, a major source of new revenue. However, in mid-2020, concerns arose about the safety of the Jet 7 Xtra Flex. On July 27, 2020, Penumbra issued a notice to its U.S. customers and practitioners acknowledging reported cases where the distal tip of the catheter broke or was extended, with a risk of injury or death. The message warned doctors to be careful with Penumbra's Jet 7 Xtra Flex, and insisted that Penumbra was committed to product safety and performance and was continuing to monitor and investigate these side effects reports. Despite the foregoing, the defendants repeatedly assured investors during the teaching period that the Jet 7 Xtra Flex was absolutely safe and not a product that needed any possibility of it needing to be recalled, as Penumbra was taking all necessary measures to protect patients. The period will begin on 3 August 2020, when Penumbra will announce its financial results for the second quarter of 2020. On a conference call with analysts conducted the same day, Adam Elssesser, Penumbra's Chief Executive Officer, was asked about the Jet 7 Xtra Flex MAX, a delivery device that uses the Jet 7 Xtra Flex catheter, and replied that Penumbra was doing some of the work we were doing with each new product that has been approved to evaluate and make sure it's all right and boasted that the device is exactly what we hoped it would be. The truth regarding Jet 7 Xtra Flex's safety was revealed to the market through a series of revelations. First, on September 14, 2020, the Financial Journalism Foundation (FFJ), an independent non-profit news channel, published an article that raised serious questions about the safety profile of the Jet 7 Xtra Flex. The FFJ noted that since its introduction in mid-2019, there have been 12 deaths in an FDA database that occurred after a surgeon injected an iodine contrastant into the Jet 7 Xtra Flex. Following this news, Penumbra's stock price fell by nearly 3%, from $199.43 per share on September 13, 2020 to $193.66 per share on September 14, 2020. Then, on November 23, 2020, an article was published in the Journal of NeuroInterventional Surgery presenting the cases of three patients who due to Jet 7 Xtra Flex device failures, including two fatalities. As this report was more widely circulated, Penumbra stock caused it to fall from $254.71 on November 23, 2020 to $224.12 on November 25, 2020, a decline of about 12%. Finally on 15 December 2020, after the closed, Penumbra issued a press release announcing that it is issuing an urgent recall of the Jet 7 Xtra Flex because the catheter may become susceptible to distal tip damage during use that can lead to injury or death. Following this news, Penumbra's share price decreased 7%, from $188.82 per share on December 15, 2020 to $174.98 per share as of December 16, 2020, down from $13.84 per share. The complaint alleges that the defendants did not inform investors throughout the letra period that: (1) the Jet 7 Xtra Flex had experienced design errors that made it unsafe for normal use; (2) Penumbra did not adequately address the risk of the Jet 7 Xtra Flex causing serious injury and death, which had in fact already occurred; (3) The Jet 7 Xtra Flex would probably be recalled due to safety concerns; and (4) as a result, Penumbra's public statements were materially false and misleading at all relevant times.
